This would appear to be the case with the Coreans. - They are now said to be experiencing, in connection with their late treaty with the Japanese Government, all the bitterness that springs from a too-late repentance. they dread lest the new treaty with Japangiving merchants of that country liberty to reside and carry on trade in some of their down the barriers of their exclusiveness and course with them. The Coreans are perhaps the most sublimely ignorant and, at the same time, conceited people on the face of the Japan they know scarcely anything of the appreciated by those residing in the vicinity. sically robust and powerful, they are yet Full of braggadocio and inordinately fond of visable to give them instruction in some remote without whom no insurrection seems to be on their endeavours to shine as patriots. of resolute men. An old writer states that they have a perfect abhorrance of the wight of blood, and that when any distemper visits them they are immediately thrown into a panic, and frequently wholly forsake those suffering from a contagious disorder. They are also described as being weak, credulous, deceitful, over-reaching, and much given to pillering. Altogother their character does not stand high, and it is to be Anstria. feared that, while much more prejudiced and conservative than the Chinese, they share in few of the latter's good qualities. The Japanese are rather apprehensive now

But it is uscless on that accountto oppose it. Sooner or later Corea would there for a long period), which will doubtless have been compelled to throw open her ports | prove yery interesting and instructive. It is to to foreign trade, and it is improbable that the Japanese bave anticipated that event by many years. That the Coreans have so long remained isolated from the world is due chiefly to their insignificance, and the sooner THE VARIOUS HOUSE PLAGS they become acquainted with that circumstance the better it will be for them. The advantages to be derived from the opening up of this peninsular kingdom have never seemed very great, and there is no reason to bolieve that it would afford an extensive market for European goods. The balance of gain would underiably be on the side of the Coreans, who would be utterly unable to appreciate the fact. Although tributary to China, Corea is virtually cut off from the rest of the world, and is about the most defenceless and belpless country in the world. A more easy prey to an ambitious power could scarcely be found in any quarter of the globe. The Chinese protectorate, it is tolerably plain by recent events, is chiefly confined to the acceptance of the yearly tribute carried by the Corean Ambassadors to Peking. By obtaining recognition as an independent country, and establishing a trade with foreign nations Corea would considerably strengthen her position. At the present moment she stands in some danger of absorption by her powerful and ambitious northern neighbour, Russia. Whether her Government suspects this fact or not it hard to say. But it exists, and the Chinese and Japanese Governments are not blind to the position of affairs, though neither of them would care to intervene in her behalf.

The opening of Corea to trade is not worth the expenditure of either money or lives to

THE POLITICAL SITUATION IN THE NORTH

Events annear to be succeeding each other apidly in the North. Hardly had we heard of the excitement shown by the Tientain populace at Li's approaching departure, and his alleged reply that foreigners were not to be distrusted in such matters-when we are told that he has sent to sek Sir Thomas Wade to come to Tientein, as he himself was really afraid to leave. Two mandaring, Ma, the Magistrate of Tientain. and Hail, the Ambassador elect to England, had ben sent down to meet the British Minister at Obefoo, and urge the plea that Li was afraid lest the people should rise on foreigners in his absence. It was, however, further suggested that the whole affair was got up to give Li an excuse for not going, and to make Sir Thomas Wade come to him instead; and we were anxionaly waiting to learn how Sir Thomas would act in the emergency, when a third report comes that Li has decided, after all, to go o Cheloo; and that very urgent communicaions are passing between him and the Emresses, which are understood to mean pressing advice on his part to comply with our demand. and a determination not even to stop at advice this is not taken. Li is credited with a determination to employ his soldiers to repel any attempt at rising, if necessary. And this alleged intention quite bears out the opinion we have expressed, that he knows too well how hopelessly such an event would compramise China with foreigners, to permit it if he can possibly avoid it -however much he may be nolined to use the threat, as political capital.— Altogether the political position is very full of interest, and forther news will be anxiously

We append a translation of a tranquilising roolamation issued by order of the Vicerov: "The Territorial and Haikwan Tactais of Cientain issue a proclamation. With the two boats the Albert Nyanza was | Chinese Imperial Loan-£100. circumnavigated, and its exact dimensions determined. It was found to be 140 miles in length, with a width of 50 miles considerably less than had been imagined; just as Lake Nyassa was recently found by absolute measurement to be nearly 100 miles longer than was supposed. The President of the Geographical Society rightly said at the meeting that so important and rapid had been the discoveries of the last three or four years that a new map of Africa must be made, the present large diagram being no longer available as a record of our knowledge. If now we turn the fature, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that great events are preparing not only in the centre of this great continent, but in Africa generally. The Egyptian conquest of Darfur and Wadni has doubtless given, as Sir Henry Rawlinson pointed out to travelling trader. lately, a great impetus to exploration in this | Yellow Peas-S,000 piculs, at $2.05. by direction. So important a fact cannot be without fruitful results. Since so many int rests are concerned, t cannot be doubted that within a few years great changes will be seen in the relation of Africa and the rest of the world, and in the condition of the mixed races in occupation of this vast continent: It is too early to write the history of African exploration, and it is too early to foreenst its more immediate, much less its remote, consequences on the destinies of the negro race. Exploration is only yet at its first stage, and the practical results are wholly undeveloped. But now that discovery has opened out such a prospect of commerce and civilization by direct lines o communication (from the Mediterranean by the Nile, from the Indian Ocean by the Zambesi, and the South Atlantic by the Cougo) is must engage serious attention. Not only are there great expeditions in progress-from the Nile under public and private control, Egyptian and English; from the north-east coast under Italian auspices; from the sast by Zanzibar, under Mr. Stanley; and from Zambesi by the Scotch Church Mission but we now hear of an international congress of the geographical societies at Brussels at the invitation of the King of the Thereter attached 84.0 | 85.0 Belgians. The project is still in the incipient pirection of Wind stage probably, and the exact conditions are not yet determined under which these societies will be naked to contribute to an international Dry Thermometer 88.0 84.0 understanding as to the best means of uniting to open up Central Africa to commerce and civilization. But this much may safely be concluded, that from no one could such an invitation be more welcome than from the King who was ready to bear the whole charge of Lieutenant Cameron's expedition while its duration and cost were uncertain. It is not necessary to adopt that distinguished officer's sanguine estimate of the capabilities of the newly discovered regions in Central Africa, with their great lakes, their rich products both vegetable and mineral, and possibility of uniting by sto 7 fresh. 7 to 8 strong. 8 to 10 heavy. 10 to 12 violent. a short canal of twenty to thirty miles across a flat country the two great rivers Congo and E. CHURCH AND STATE IN SAXONY. A-German-correspondent writes:-The law relative to the rights of the State in reference to the Roman Catholic Church, which had been voted by the Saxon Second Chumber, was adopted on the 29th of last mouth by the First Chamber, after being amended in two points. Prince George of Saxony, brother of the King and heir presumptive to the Orown, and sixteen other members, voted against it. Prince George denied to the State the right of drawing the limit between it and the Roman Catholic's Church's rights, and demanded a concordat. To de facto existing limitations the Roman Catholic Church could submit, the Prince said; but, when these limitations are to be regulated or fixed principally by way of legislation, the Church empot submit. The Roman Oatholic bishop, Dr. Bernert, spoke with moderation; but committed the mistake of appealing to the Peace of Westphalia, which, as subsequent speakers proved to him, was not only hever recognized by the Roman Catholic Church. but even anathematized by it.-Pall Mall

THE GRAVE OF LINCOLN. Here is the grave of Lincoln, Here by the Sangamon River, Here in the shade of the oak trees. Here mong the rounded hill tops Of the green and rolling prairie; Here where the golden sunshine Blooms in the roses of lovers And ripeus the corn and the acorns. Under a monument stately He lies who no monument needed. None save a rock with his name on, Saying: This is the grave of Lincoln

Useless the bronze and the granite! Lincoln cannot be forgotten. Days may fade over the prairie, Stars rice and set in their glory In the far-off night-shadowed heaven Summers may ripen the acorns ... Till oak trees die from the hill-tops; Lorers may die with their roses, But always while Sangamou's waters Flow through the long Mississippi Onward and into the ocean Men will remember Lincoln.

Better the world for his living; Guide of the State through the battle. Helper of slaves to their freedom: Serious, strong and sweet hearton. Rugged, yet wonllo and tender i Lover of men and of humor, Lover of women and children, Lover of wisdom and friendship, over of freedom and union-Tiving at last, that these die not:

Dying at last, but forever To live in the hearts of his people. Here lies the body of Lincoln, Safe in the crypt of the granite; Inder the abade of the oak trees Inder the prairie supebine. Under the splendour of star-light But this was only his shadow liding the soul and the substance Not here is the living Lincoln, Not bere the faithful, true-hearted leader and friend of the people. He is not dead; though we see not His shadow and presence among us. .
